Up in the 15th Precinct they don't say, "Tell it to Sweeney!" because they know that Lilly Cohen, eleven years old, of 28 Avenue A, will do it, anyway, if they don't clean house. Sweeney is captain of the 5th street police station, and Lilly is the idol of the 15th. About three weeks ago Captain Sweeney was walking toward the station, when a little girl came along from Public School 25, which is right across the street from the station. She was fleeing from ribald remarks that reached the ears of the captain, sounded a lot like "Mind your business" and were punctuated with frequent references to the kind of family Lilly belonged to and her own neddlesome ways. The captain inquired what it was all about, and the little girl told him that she had been objecting to the defacing of the walls of the school with chalk.

"At home I'm accustomed to having things clean and nice." she added, "and I think little folks ought to be brought up to be neat and clean, and not dirty public property. I told the other scholars so and they laughed at me and only made more marks on the school. Then, When I told them they ought to be askamed to deface school buildings they told me to mind my own business, and some of the toughest ones awore at me and called me horrid names."
